

Children create music in individually unique ways, but also using common processes. Each creating process component stated in the United States'™ National Core Music Standards (imagine, plan and make, evaluate and refine, and present; NCCAS, 2014) is explored in this text using children'™s creations from China, India, Ireland, Mexico, and the United States as examples. What can the characteristics of music created by children from five diverse locations teach us about creating music? How do the sounds surrounding children in their schools, homes, and communities affect the music they create and what can be learned from this? How do children'™s similar creating processes inform how we teach music? These questions are investigated as the children'™s music compositions and improvisations are shared and examined. As this narrative unfolds, readers will become acquainted with the children, their original music, and what the children say about their music and its creation. What we learn from this exploration leads to teaching strategies, projects, lesson plans, and mentoring recommendations that will help music educators benefit from these particular children'™s creations.
